Fight on Pay and Jobs, as well as Pensions

Vote Independent Left in the DWP GEC elections

The leadership we need

DWP members need a GEC that:

- defends jobs (thousands gone over the last year and many thousands more set to go);
- defends living standards (slashed over recent years and set to be squeezed even harder under the government's 1% pay cap)
- puts equality at the heart of all it does;
- links members up in a common defence rather than isolated to be picked off office by office, member by member;
- advocates a membership led group rather than one local reps and members have no idea what the GEC is up to from one month to the next as all negotiations are conducted in confidence with management.

The Independent Left seeks your vote as the champion of such policies.

Pay

Pay is the litmus test of any trade union leadership. Under the current leadership your living standards have been slashed. Over the last seven years the value of the max in each grade has risen by 5%, due to successive policies of pay freezes (ie cuts in real terms) and pay restraint (increases capped at 1%). Don't forget that PCS policy is that the max is the rate for the job. Prices, according to the RPI measure of inflation, have increased by 20.8% over the same period. This means that your pay has been effectively cut by over 15% over the past period. Progression has been effectively abolished in DWP.

And in all of this time we have had a Left Unity leadership at DWP level. With the economy flat lining, there is every reason to believe that the 1% pay cap will continue. Even if Labour get elected there is no reason to believe that this will change. Labour support the Coalition policy of capping public sector pay increases.

Left Unity have had seven years to sort out our pay and they haven't. What makes you think they will do any better in the future?

Jobs

We have seen a year on year decline in jobs whilst our workloads continue to increase. The introduction of Universal Credit, dubbed Universal Chaos, means even greater insecurity for our members and is bound to result in even further job loss. What have the current GEC done to combat this? The GEC have recently submitted a staffing claim for an extra 20,000 staff without, apparently, consulting branches. We suspect this has been done, rather cynically, as an attempt to head off motions submitted by branches instructing the GEC to submit a staffing claim. It's amazing what motivates people when elections come round!

We support the approach taken when 43 of our colleagues were issued with compulsory redundancy notices. It was correct to ballot all members across the Group. This should be our de facto position when anyone in DWP is issued with a compulsory redundancy notice.

Industrial action strategy

It appears that the leadership have taken note of members and branches who said we need more than the occasional one-day strike, punctuated by months of inactivity, if we are serious about defending members living standards and terms and conditions and start winning concessions from the government. At last May's PCS conference, the Independent Left proposed the following policy:

“(PCS should) seek to build and maintain public sector trade union unity in defence of our respective pension rights whilst insisting on PCS's right to fight as an independent union in defence of its members and without having to wait many weeks and months for other trade unions to join us in action (and of course recognising the right of other unions to do likewise). We should seek to take action with as many unions as possible but this should not be a pre-condition for taking further action. PCS should go it alone if no other unions are prepared to strike over this issue.”

Instead, the NEC (effectively the same people that run the DWP GEC) argued that PCS could not take on the government on its own and win, when “winning” is never defined. But it is possible to take on the government on your own and win concrete victories, such as the previously stated 43 compulsory redundancy notices being withdrawn. We welcome the fact that Left Unity have now accepted our position. It would have been preferable if this would have been done in May but better late than never. We have argued for years that we need a voluntary levy of members to fund paid selective action. This should take place alongside national strikes and overtime bans.

Welfare reform

It's not just public sector workers who are being asked to pay for a crisis we didn't create. Benefit claimants are being targeted with a 1% cap on annual increases. We should make common cause with claimants. The coalition are using the ongoing financial crisis to reduce social costs so that when capitalism recovers the social bill for the bosses and the state will be much smaller. In short they want to make the rich, richer and the poor, poorer.

PCS, alongside other unions, should organise active, visible campaigns, demanding the reversal of the cuts and a working class emergency plan to increase social revenue by taking the vast wealth of the banks into public ownership taxing the rich and big business, closing tax loopholes and cutting military spending. Any single one of these measures would free up enough money to fund decent pensions for all workers, address the sharp decline in workers living standards through substantial pay rises and restore the benefit cuts and expand welfare provision.

Unions must go on the ideological offensive against government and media propaganda to divide us into workers and shirkers. Our class needs a joined-up project to counter the joined-up project of the bosses and the government which serves them.
